PHILLIPS ALUMNI DINNER

Donations Amounting to $1,635,500 Announced by Headmaster Alfred E. Stearns—Gifts Made to George T. Eaton in Recognition of Long Service

Gifts and bequests amounting to $1,638,500 made to Phillips academy during the past year were announced last Friday afternoon by the headmaster, Dr. Alfred E. Stearns, clerk of the board of trustees, at the annual luncheon of the Phillips Andover Alumni association, held in the Borden gymnasium. The bulk of this amount was received through anonymous sources, it was said.

A gathering of nearly 700 alumni and members of the graduating class filled the huge building. An unusual circumstance was the presence of a woman at the festive board, something which has never happened before in the history of the association. The woman was Mrs. Leila Morse Rummell of Paris, eighty-year-old daughter of Samuel F. B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph.

Mrs. Rummell in making a few remarks, said that Andover to her is hallowed ground because of the spirit of her father who graduated from Andover in 1805 before entering Yale. In speaking of the invention of the telegraph she read a letter sent ot her father by one of his contemporaries in which the writer declared there was nothing in the Scriptures indicating that God had the slightest intention that man should travel on railroad at the outrageous speed of fifteen miles per hour and send messages by telegraph. The concluding remarks of the letter were: "It's a device of Satan to lead immoral souls down to hell." This brought loud applause from the alumni as did the remark by the toastmaster that Mrs. Rummell, now eighty years of age, has crossed the Atlantic ocean fifty-five times.

Mr. George T. "Pap" Eaton, who recently completed fifty tears as a member of the faculty and who has instructed thousands of students in the intricacies of mathematics, as did his father before him, was honored by the gathering. He was presented with a beautiful gold watch by Dr. Claude M. Fuess on behalf of the faculty and with a clock by the School the gift being presented by Class President Walter S. Kimball of Sistersville, W. Va. The class of 1905, through Boetious Sullivan of Chicago, also presented him with a handsome silver vase. Mrs. Eaton was presented with a bouquet of roses. Mr. Eaton retires this term.

PUNCHARD COMMENCEMENT

Class Day Exercises Held in Town Hall—Two New Prizes Are Awarded—Class of 1930 Gives $100 for the Punchard War Memorial

JUNIOR HIGH GRADUATION

Address Given by Principal Nathan C. Hamblin and Diplomas Awarded by Mrs. Edward V. French

One hundred nineteen boys and girls were awarded diplomas at the graduating exercises of the Stowe Junior high school held in the Town hall on Thursday afternoon. Of this number one hundred one were graduated from the Stowe school, six from the North school, one was a post-graduate student, three were members of the special class and eight of the transfer group.

The musical numbers included "Our Boys and Girls of California" by Ascher and "Valse" by Schmidt by the orchestra and three choruses "Awake! Awake" "Sylvia" and "The Heavens Resound" by members of the graduating class with orchestral accompaniment.

"Work is overcoming resistance" was the theme of the address given by Principal Nathan C. Hamblin of the Punchard school. The definition is one which he learned in his youth while studying science. Some of the resistances to be overcome were enumerated as laziness, the temptation to do things useful or beneficial in themselves but which distract from work, the tendency to follow the crowd, intemperance in indulging in amusements and either the sense of a lack of ability or a sense of self-satisfaction. Aid to overcoming resistance may be found in developing the will power which may be increased by use just as muscular power can be by doing one's own work and not depending on others, yet by profiting by the help and advice of parents and teachers. For those who succeed in overcoming he quoted the promise in Revelations "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God."

In opening his remark Principal Hamblin congratulated this particular class which is graduating in the Tercentenary year of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, and praised the pageant which they had given in observance of the anniversary.

Diplomas were awarded by Mrs. E. V. French a member of the Andover School Committee to the graduating class:

Doris Wooding Anderson, Charlotte Reid Auchterlonie, Earl James Bowden, Dorothy Mason Boyce, Thelma Marion Beck, Evaline Amelia Cairnie, Albert Burnett Carlson, Mary Chacovitch, Frank Herbert Chadwick, Allan Gordon Chadwcki, Elizabeth Mae Cole, Richard Twining Cooper, Willard Huntington Currier, Margaret Katherine Dane, George William Davison, Zigmond Dembkoski, Agnes Caldwell Deyermond, Robert Victor Deyermond, Elizabeth Coulter Deyermond, Arthur Freeman Doucette, Harold Francis Evans, Helen Sutherland Ferrier, Ella Bernice Fraize, Joan Isabel Fraser, Harry Francis, Sam Edwin Furness, Jr., Edith Barbara Gates, Edith Amminilla Griffin, Dorothy Mae Gordon, James Gordon, John Edward Anderson Gorrie, Charles Gray, George Edwin Hadley, Norman Fohner Hansen, Richard Nichols Hawkes, James Francis Haggerty, Marion Gertrude Herbert, Charles Asa Hill, Lina Beatrice Hazelton, Roger William Herrick, Carolyn Hurwitch, Evy Florence Elizabeth Hillerstrom, Ruth Evelyn Kearn, George Baxter Keith, Harold Palmer Kitchen, Frances Koza, Charles Thomas Krause, Morris Krinsky, Zigmond Kupis, Ruby Nicoll Laurie, Doris Helen Livingston, Chester Laurence Low, Doris Arlene Lyle, John Malachi Lynch, Josephine Helen MacDonald, Robert Henry Murray Maclaren, June MacLellan, Helen Elizabeth McDonald, Eleanor Elizabeth Manning, Ruth Frances McTernen,

CLASS SONG

Of Punchard we'll sing, let our voices respond
To the thought that is dear to each soul.
Inspired and fostered by lofty ideals,
Achievement is ever our goal.
Let all our ambitions be shaped to the end
That a credit to thee we may be;
Though our paths may diverge, be there ever the urge
To be faithful and loyal to thee.

The speeding years glide on the wings of the morn;
They pause not to leave in their wake
A hint of the hardships that life can exact,
Whatever the course we may take.
'Tis only through trial, like well-tempered steel,
That the value of service is found.
May we rise to the test, of ourselves give the best,—
Hail to Punchard! Our praises resound.

METROPOLITAN THEATRE

This week the Metropolitan shows as its film feature Jack Oakie in "The Social Lion", with Mary Brian, Skeets Gallagher, and Olive Borden prominent in his supporting cast. This is Oakie's first picture as a star and provides this wise-cracking comedian with a vehicle full of situations for his antics and gags. No star in the history of filmdom has made more friends in a shorter time than has Oakie and he is rapidly becoming more and more of a vogue among screen fans. Eddie Michaels, the man with the misbehaving feet, dances his way into favor, and Talent and Merit live up to their names in furnishing amusement.

At the twin-console Wurlitzer Arthur Martel and Esther Newcombe will play "My Friend the Organ".

Coming on Thursday, June 26th, is Helen Kane in "Dangerous Nan McGrew", while on the stage Waring's Pennsylvanians will show their amusement wares. American Legion Junior Baseball

The practice preliminary season has about ended and the league season opens next week. All county games must be played before July 12th. The rules governing the contest limit each Post entering a team to 14 players who will not have attained their seventeenth birthday before September 15, 1930.

Applications must be in the hands of George W. Jones, the Department Athletic Officer at headquarters in Worcester, by June 15th.

The following names were sent in: Higas Asonian, Drummond Bissett, Archie Davidson, Melvin Grover, Ray Gallant, Joseph Davis, John McCartney, Joseph Lynch, Harry Francis, Francis O'Connor, James McGrath, Albert Swenson, Lester Hilton and John Deyermond.

Boys not finding their names on this list must not feel discouraged as some very promising young material had to be dropped.

It is hoped that they will retain their interest in the team and in another year they will no doubt, become regulars

The schedule is completed with the exception of two games pending with Salem. In a few days, the schedule will be announced.

Interested baseball Andoverites are urged to follow up the boys in their games. Give them support.

Senior C. E. Visits Ipswich Beach

The following members of the Senior C. E. society of the South church enjoyed a motor trip to Ipswich beach Saturday afternoon. Mary K. Francis, Charles Currier, Jeannette Meehan, Ruth Hall, Robert Whitcomb, William Emmons, Marjorie West, Luther Gulick, Dorothy Foster, John Monro, Claxton Monro, Jr., Howard Huntress, Howard Trott, Frances Hall, Homer Wadman, Virginia Abercrombie, Arlene Meehan, Clifford Wadman, Rev. Frederick B. Noss, assistant pastor of the South church and Miss Barbara Noss.

The popularity of sport which puts the life of the entertainer in jeopardy is as old as the Roman amphitheatre. Those who connect blood-letting with fun, should applaud the work of the man who drove a racing car off an Indiana track, and into a grandstand, to the injury of a score, and the death of a half dozen or so.

Turns out Best Team in 18 Seasons

Punchard high has closed the most successful season Eugene V. Lovely has coached since his reign of 18 years as baseball coach at the school.

During the past season his boys played 15 ball games, winning 14 consecutively and losing the final game to Methuen, 1 to 0. The boys copped the 1930 Suburban league title.

In 1911, the spring previous to Lovely's start at Punchard the nine won 12 straight games after losing the first three. This record was beaten by the 1930 team on June 5, when it copped its 13th game in successive order.

Howard Walker, captain of the nine during the 1930 season, was the real batting leader with a mark of .393 having played in all of the 15 games. Kenneth Wallace who participated in 11 had a mark of .500 with 21 hits in 42 trips. Jim O'Donnell in 12 games hit .400.

Higus Asonian was the only regular not over the .300 mark although he was but two points from it with a mark o.' .298 in all games played. He excelled at second base in his first year of play and made but two errors in 51 chances during the season.

The team as a whole had a batting average of .345 which was 100 points better than that of the opposition. In fielding Punchard excelled with a mark of .949 to .918 for the opposition. The final figures:

Receives Degree at Boston University

Miss Ida Mae Grover, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Grover of 7 Harding street was one of the 1485 seniors to be graduated from the ten departments of Boston university in the 57th annual commencement exercises which were held Monday morning at 10.30 in the Boston Arena. She was a candidate for the degree of Bachelor of Arts. President Daniel L. Marsh presented honorary degrees to twelve outstanding leaders in the fields of arts and sciences. Before a capacity audience of relatives and friends, Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, B. U. '15, president of Depauw University, Greencastle, Ind., delivered the commencement theme, discussing "The Graduate's Threefold Dilemma."

The total of 1485 seniors in the group is an increase of 406 graduates over last year's class of 1079. For the first time in the history of Boston University, degrees were granted of Bachelor of Science in Journalism, and Bachelor of Music, and diplomas in Physical Education were awarded to 111 seniors in the Sargent School of Physical Education, making a total of twenty-five different types of degrees. The Sargent School was affiliated with Boston University a year ago.

In addition to the high scholastic standing which Miss Grover has maintained throughout her school career she has established a record of perfect attendance over a period of fifteen consecutive years, not being absent, tardy or dismissed early once during that long period. While in the first grade she was quarantined while her brother was ill with scarlet fever but this is the only instance in which her perfect attendance record has been marred during her 16 years of school life

Miss Grover was born in Lawrence but came to Andover in her early years and began her career in the Andover public schools. She graduated from Punchard high school where she was salutatorian of her class in 1926 and entered Boston university in the fall. At B. U. she majored in French and Latin.

Miss Grover's two younger brothers have also done well in keeping up the record of their older sister, Elmer J. is now at Harvard, a member of the class of 1931, while Melvin G. is a member of the class of 1931 at Phillips Andover. Both the boys have attained attendance records at "Old P.A." and since leaving the grade schools the Grovers have continued their courses in higher education after receiving scholarships.

Holt Association of America to Meet in Andover

The Holt Association of America will celebrate its Decennial in a fitting manner, by a two-fold reunion,—on Thursday, June 26th, at Wallingford, Conn., the town where the William Holt branch originated, and on Saturday, June 28th at Andover, the home of Nicholas Holt. This latter reunion should be of special interest to many in this vicinity because the Association wishes it clearly understood that any descendants of the Holt family will be heartily welcomed at the reunion, whether members or not. There will be no business, the day being set apart for a purely social gathering.

Tentative plans are as follows—at 1 p.m. luncheon at the Manse ($1.00 per person); at 2 p.m. short motor trips, if possible, to the Abbot house, the Historical Society and various other places of interest to the family; at 3 p.m. all will gather at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John V. Holt, 74 Bartlet street; at 4 p.m. at the Old Homestead on Holt's Hill, the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ward, who will hold "open house" for the Holt family from 4-5 p.m.

Word has been received from about thirty members who will be present, including several Association officers, and representing the States of Pennsylvania, Delaware, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Massachusetts. It is earnestly hoped that many New Englanders will avail themselves of this opportunity of meeting those members of the Holt family who have come so far, on a pilgrimage to the home of their ancestors.

Reservations for luncheon may be made by notifying Mrs. John V. Holt, and any not wishing to attend the luncheon, may continue with the reunion as outlined. It is hoped that several "Junior " members will be present. These children will bring box lunches and have a picnic together, with an adult member in charge, the time and place to be announced later. Any child of the family will be welcome and there will be amusement planned for them.

Local Girls Graduate From Burdett College

Miss Josephine Hurley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hurley of Harding street and Miss Hazel Polgreen, daughter of Aubrey Polgreen of Washington avenue were among the graduates who received their diplomas from the Burdett College at the exercises held last Saturday afternoon in Symphony hall.

While in attendance at the school, Miss Hurley has been an honor student, as has Miss Polgreen, who is now employed with the Edison Electric Illuminating company of Boston.

Both young ladies were graduated from the Punchard High school with the Class of 1929.

Bachelor of Law Degree Conferred

Two Andover boys received Bachelor of Laws degrees Tuesday evening at the annual graduation exercises of Suffolk Law school in Tremont Temple, Boston, Alan T. Polgreen, son of Aubrey G. Polgreen of Washington avenue and Wilfred T. Dwyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael M. Dwyer of Summer street. Both young men graduated with the Class of 1925 at Punchard high school. Polgreen is now employed by a Boston law firm and Dwyer is employed in the efficiency department of the Arlington mills, Lawrence. Members of both families attended the exercises.

Two of the university's crack golfers sliced their drives into the rough and went in search of the balls. They searched for a long time, without success, a kindly old lady watching them with sympathetic interest.

Finally, after the search had lasted half an hour, the dear old lady spoke to them.

"I don't want to bother you, gentlemen," she said, "but would it be cheating, if I told you where they are?"—Texas Ranger.

The result was in doubt until the last man was retired in the ninth inning. While Andover was leading and had apparently clinched the game in the eighth inning, a batting rally by Exeter in the ninth would have soon turned the tide so close was the score. The tension was over when Merritt struck out Flock and the members of the victorious Andover nine were borne from the field on the shoulders of their overjoyed schoolmates.

Street Railways Operating More Motor Buses

Street railway companies are steadily extending the use of motor buses either to supplant unprofitable electric car lines or to act as feeders to existing car lines. Not only are companies which have been operating buses increasing the use of this vehicle, but also more electric companies are operating buses today than ever before.

On April 1, 1930, 380 electric railways were operating a total of 12,819 motor buses over approximately 23,900 miles of route.

Sixty-six companies, operating 647 motor buses aver 2,262 miles of route, have substituted buses entirely for electric cars.

Of the total number of companies, 165 operate in large cities only, 61 are rated as interurban, 101 both city and interurban, and 53 are unclassified.

During the six months extending from September, 1929, to March, 1930, 18 companies began to operate motor buses for the first time, and the total number of new buses purchased by all companies was 954 to operate over 1,748 miles of route. The number of buses operated by companies which have recently taken up such operation ranges from 1 to 35.

North Andover to Observe Tercentenary

A celebration will be conducted in North Andover Saturday and Sunday, June 21 and 22, in observance of the 300th anniversary of the founding of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. The various committees have completed their plans nad indications point to an interesting celebration.

Saturday the house of the North Andover Historical society at 153 Academy road will be open from two until six o'clock and from three until six o'clock tea will be served on the green. There will be special exhibits of furniture, mirrors, pewter, coverlets, handspinning and quilting.

The old houses to be opened to the public from two until four o'clock will be: Kittredge house, built in 1784, on Academy road; Col. Frye house, built in 1690, on Chestnut street; Governor Bradstreet house, built in 1667 on Osgood street; Moody Bridges house, on Great Pond road; and the Gayton Osgood house, built in 1800 on Osgood street.

The present owners of these houses have many beautiful antiques which will be on display. Plans are for the hostesses of the various houses of interest to be dressed in a period costume.

The North Parish church will be open to the public from two until six o'clock and a very old and valuable communion service, dating from 1724 to 1801, will be on exhibition. One of the pieces, as well as the church bell, was made by Paul Revere.

No admission will be charged for the home or church exhibits, although a small fee will be asked at the tea party.

This tea party is to be one of the outstanding features of the entire celebration. The hostesses and waitresses will be dressed in old fashioned costumes and it is expected that memories of the early settlers will be revived through costumes of their times.

It has been stated that Governor Dudley Bradstreet and his wife, Anne Dudley Bradstreet, will appear at this party. Who the personages will be to reveal these characters is not as yet known. Several persons are planning to arrive in carriages and on the whole the party is expected to be of great interest.

On Sunday at four o'clock a service commemorating the Tercentenary of the settlement of the Massachusetts Bay colony will be held at the North Parish church at four o'clock. Rev. Charles E. Park, D.D., of Boston will deliver a sermon on The Purpose and Spirit of the Puritans. The combined choirs of the churches of North Andover will lead the congregation in the singing of old hymns.

The North Andover Historical society house will also be open on Sunday from two to six o'clock.

Shower and Luncheon in Honor of Shawsheen Teacher

A shower and luncheon was given Tuesday at the Andover Manse on Main street by the Shawsheen village school teachers in honor of Miss Roxanne Smith, who will be married in the late summer to Earl Anderson of Woburn. During the evening Miss Anne Harnedy, in behalf of the Shawsheen teachers, presented Miss Smith with a purse of gold. Miss Smith has been a tea cher of the fourth grade for the past five years.

Sending Out Leaders

With its physical plant ever increasing Phillips academy's educational product, under the wise direction of Headmaster Stearns and his able colleagues of the faculty, is steadily gaining in proficiency and leadership.

A good illustration of this is afforded by the fact that of the five students to receive highest honors at Dartmouth this year two were Andover men; that authorities at Yale declare that from the point of view of stability, reliability, sportsmanship, scholastic standing and all around leadership the Andover boys top all others at the university; and that reports from Harvard show that of all preparatory schools having ten or more boys there, Andover has the highest percentage of the dean's list.

Such a record speaks volumes as to what is being accomplished on Andover hill. With every facility provided for training its students physically and mentally Andover is not only maintaining the high traditions of the past but is reaching out to broaden its influence and perfect its accomplishments.

By establishing sound character, providing solid instruction in the arts and sciences, by teaching sportsmanship as well as mathematics, languages, history, etc., the academy is developing a class of leadership from the flower of American youth that is bound to have far-reaching effect on the future of the nation, in business, professional, religious, philanthropic and welfare lines.

No graduates of the preparatory schools of the world go forth better equipped to face the future and to understand the business of living than the boys who go from Andover Hill.

Service

Emphasis of the opportunities to youth in these days, noted by baccalaureate and commencement speakers so often this year, usually included the chance for service. And well might that phase of life be stressed, for never before has there been greater need for men and women who place helpfulness above selfishness.

With material prosperity so often the goal, the high ideals of living too frequently are lost sight of. Spurred on by the greed for gain too many people abandon the ethical for the so-called practical and conduct their lives on the low level that is reached inevitably when man lives for self alone.

In this changing age, an era of speed, bustle and high nervous tension, thousands are falling by the wayside, unable to stand the pace. Graft, crime, disregard for law prevail to an alarming degree,—a lawlessness that is one of the consequences of the development of the speedy transportation that makes detection difficult. To counteract such conditions that drag us down, development of an urge to service can accomplish much. With wider desire to help others instead of devoting all our energy to efforts to advance our own selfish aims, there would be less attention paid to personal matters and more to community interests.

Thoughtfulness for the aged, the sick, the erring, the unfortunate should not be confined to clergymen and welfare workers. If the Boy Scout idea were to permeate all humanity, that of doing at least one good turn a day, there would be spread a leaven that, eventually, would draw all men away from themselves and awaken in them a real interest in the welfare and progress of their fellowmen.

To serve is really to live.

Avoid Bathing Risks

The appalling toll of deaths from drowning during the recent heat wave in New England should serve as a warning to all local bathers to take no chances when in the water.

So far as possible swimmers should go to supervised bathing places, but all who enter the water anywhere, whether in lake, river or ocean, should have companions near by who are capable of coming to their rescue in case of need.

The lure of the water is great on hot summer days, but no attempt to keep cool is worth taking risks of losing one's life. With proper precautions swimming is to be encouraged for there is no more healthful exercise known.

Swim if you will, but observe the rules of safety.

Editorial Cinders

"Great men are they who see that spiritual is stronger than any material force, that thoughts rule the world."—Emerson.

The prestige attained by the Punchard High school baseball team through its long series of victories this season was scarcely dimmed at all by its 1-0 defeat at Methuen in its final game. There is no disgrace in a one-hit, one-run reverse, especially to a team that has won all of its other fourteen games against some formidable high school opponents. The Punchard nine's record is a credit to the players, their coach and to the school.

With the state and county again cooperating, Andover's last important main road approach, Union street, is to be reconstructed this year. With the completion of this work the town will have six satisfactory outlets to points north and east and, of course, a similar number of avenues of approach for traffic from northern New England.

With Myron E. Gutterson serving as toastmaster at the banquet to be held in connection with Punchard Alumni reunion tonight a treat is in store for those in attendance at the postprandial exercises. Punchard has no stauncher supporter than this graduate of the class of 1881 and the many loyal former students who will be in the gathering are certain to have an interesting reunion under his direction of the program. It is such men as he who help perpetuate the motive that influenced the far-sighted Benjamin Punchard to make the bequest that has meant so much to the education of the youth of Andover.

The election of Vance C. McCormick, '91, of Harrisburg, Pa., as president of the Phillips academy alumni association calls attention to the number of leaders of men the academy has sent out into the world. After a notable career as scholar and athlete at Andover and Yale Mr. McCormick has won a high place in the business and political life of the nation,—a typical product of one of America's greatest schools.

Harold Brackett's record of five years of perfect attendance at the South church school, together with the winning of a "Twelfth pin" for members of the Go-to-Church band resulted in the award of a special prize of ten dollars to the boy at the Children's day exercises at the church last Sunday, a well deserved recognition of his faithfulness.

With the appointment of John A. Robertson, George Forsythe and David Sime as life guards and swimming instructors at the public bathing beach at Pomp's pond the children of the town are assured of satisfactory oversight. No civic movement in Andover has accomplished more for the comfort and pleasure of the citizens than the development of the community beach at the pond and its big patronage during the recent heat wave demonstrates how much the public appreciates the bathing opportunity under safe conditions which is provided.

The presentation of a beautiful American flag by Gen. William F. Bartlett Woman's Relief corps to Andover Grange calls attention to the long record of the former organization in moves to stimulate patriotism. Though this faithful ally of the Grand Army post loses its official standing with the disbanding of the Andover post the influence of its accomplishments in Andover will never die.

Miss Ida M. Grover, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Grover of 7 Harding street, who received her degree of A.B. from the College of Liberal Arts at Boston University this week, has won distinction for herself and for her home town by establishing a record of perfect school attendance over a period of fifteen consecutive years, not being absent, tardy or dismissed during all that period. Good health and good character made such a record possible.

The many valuable gifts and high encomiums bestowed upon Prof. George T. Eaton at the Phillips academy alumni banquet in recognition of the completion of fifty years as an instructor at the institution were well deserved, and reflected the great esteem he has won by his faithful and efficient service during his long term on the faculty. Though retiring from the active teaching force, Prof. Eaton will continue his work as statistical secretary of the Alumni association. His remarkable memory and his patience in research enable him to render conspicuously effective service in that office.

Hundreds at Swimming Beach

The public swimming beach at Pomp's pond was visited by hundreds over the week-end. John A. Robertson, life guard in charge started to work Saturday and was at the beach Sunday. David Sime recently appointed assistant life guard was also at the pond Sunday helping out although he does not enter upon his duties officially for another week. The new raft and new tower will be put in place some time this week and other preparations made for what the committee expects to be the biggest and best season at the pond since it was opened.

Andover Vacation Church School Start Plans

Plans for the Andover Vacation Church School are well started. The school will open Monday, July 7, at the John Dove School under the supervision of Miss Bessie Carter of West Andover. Miss Caroline Abbot who has served so efficiently as secretary for the past two summers will again serve in that capacity.

Registration of pupils will take place at the John Dove School on July 3rd between the hours of nine and eleven. Children between the ages of four and fourteen, of any denomination, may attend and a large registration is expected. It is hoped to enlarge the Intermediate group which covers the Junior High school period. Registration fee will be $1.00, but the summer school committee does not wish to keep out any who desire to attend, so some provision will be made for those who are unable to pay this fee. It is hoped, also, to arrange a means of transportation for children who have a great distance to go.

The principals for the departments have already been obtained. Mrs. J. Albion Burtt, their very efficient Intermediate (department) principal, will take charge of that department again this year. The others principals are new but as well qualified for their departments—Miss Polly Francis in the Junior Department; Miss Ruth Perry in the Primary Department and Mrs. Grace Inness in the Kindergarten Department. To assist these principals in their work five girls are needed each week. To start the list of assistants Mrs. E. Taber McFarlin has offered her services for a week. The supervisor appreciates this willingness and it is hoped that others will respond in the same way.

In the departmental work old magazines, from which pictures may be cut, are very necessary. Will persons having magazines which they will donate please leave them with Miss Caroline Abbot, at 56 Bartlet street? Watch for further information about the Andover Vacation Church School.

Early Service at the South Church

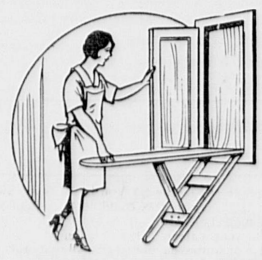

The nine o'clock service in the South church is to be continued during the coming summer Sundays. Next Sunday Rev. Frederick B. Noss will be the preacher. This service lasts half an hour. All will be welcome to it, both grown people and children, especially those whose plans for the day will prevent their attending the usual later service of the Protestant churches.

Files Petition for Bus Line

The Eastern Massachusetts Railway company filed on Monday with the Andover Selectmen a petition for a bus license in connection with proposed operation between Lawrence and Everett Terminal over substantially the same route as the street railway. By co-ordinated street railway and bus service the company believe that they can provide Andover with better service.

Closing Exercises of Briggs-Allen School

Three girls were graduated and two boys received certificates for having completed the work of the sixth grade at the closing exercises of the Briggs-Allen School held on Wednesday morning at Christ church parish house. The graduates were Ann Cutler, Martha Howe and Eleanor Johnson and the boys to receive certificates were Gerard Chapin, Jr., and Horace M. Poynter, Jr.

In observance of the Tercentenary year the essays of the graduates were on historical subjects. A paper on "Colonial Folk Lore" prefaced the class prophecy by Martha Howe, and a paper on "Colonial Poets", the class poem by Ann Cutler. The history of the Briggs-Allen School under the title of "From Six to Sixty" as well as the history of her class was given by Eleanor Johnson. In the twenty-two years of the school's existence nearly two hundred children have been entered in its classes. During the past year sixty have been enrolled.

The children's singing under the direction of Miss Miriam Sweeney, both the choruses and solos of which there were an unusual number, was especially pleasing. The Toy symphony under the spirited leadership of Judy Trowbridge responded to the applause with an encore.

Andover's Census Figures Augmented

On the suggestion of Town Clerk George A. Higgins, inquiries revealed the fact that the census enumerator had not completed his work at Lowell Junction, which is a part of Andover. Fifty-two new names have been added to the original returns increasing the May 12 report from 9913 to 9965 on June 16. Even with this addition Andover lags a little behind the 10291 shown by the 1925 state census.

The Town Clerk's letter to Richard J. White, Jr., supervisor of the census was as follows:

May 17, 1930

Richard J. White, Jr.,
Supervisor of Census
City Hall, Lynn, Mass.

DEAR SIR:

Referring to the enumeration of the Town of Andover. I have been informed that Joseph E. Frederick of Lowell Junction (a part of Andover near Ballardvale) has not been enumerated or any of his family and that he claims there are at least 48 there, who are not listed. I do not know whether or not he has sent in a coupon, but thought I would mention it to you.

It is reasonable to think that there might be an error here, because unless the enumerator was familiar with this part of the town he might have thought this territory was not in Andover and I am told that he called at the residence of one Wormwood in that vicinity, but not beyond.

They are mostly foreigners in that locality.

Respectfully yours,
GEORGE A. HIGGINS,
Town Clerk

A Tribute

MRS. CHARLOTTE A. THOMAS

The earthly life of Mrs. Charlotte A. Thomas of 8 Pond street, Stoneham, ended Wednesday morning, June 4th at the ripe age of ninety-four years and eleven months.

Mrs. Thomas was born in Andover, July 28, 1835, the daughter of Isaac and Sibyl Hardy, and lived here long enough to form enduring friendships.

For over thirty years she had resided in Stoneham, making her home with her daughter,Emma (Mrs. Joseph H. Padgett).

To think of Mrs. Thomas is to be glad that one knew her. It would be difficult to say what was her greatest characteristic. But taken all in all, one would not err in saying that it was her unfailing optimism with charity running a close second. She held that "There are nettles everywhere, but smooth green grasses are more common still. The blue of heaven is larger than the cloud." This spirit helped her over many a hard place, and put new courage into many a person with whom she came in contact. More than one person called her "Mother Thomas".

Oneof her joys for many years was working in her garden. Flowers throve under her care.

The weakness of old age had no effect on her alert mind. She was a comrade in the fullest sense, keen to enjoy nature, humor, books, world affairs, and equally responsive to the joys and sorrows of her many friends.

The children of the neighborhood loved to call on her, bringing flowers when she was too weak to go into the beloved garden, and more flowers when they heard that she had gone.

And so she passed on, leaving a sense of loss in the hearts of her friends that is indeed to be desired by all.

P.A. ALUMNI DINNER

In presenting the gold watch to Mr. Eaton, Dr. Claude M. Fuess stated that the latter was the only member of the faculty in the history of the school to attain the record of having served a full half century on the faculty. He spoke appreciatively of his work as statistical secretary of the alumni association and his ability to remember all graduates of the school and even their sisters and other relations. This is due he said to Mr. Eaton's unusual memory.

At the conclusion of the meal, over which Dwight H. Day, '95, of New York presided as toastmaster, the members held their annual meeting. Dr. Stearns reported on the various donations which were as follows: $1,000,000 from anonymous donors for the new infirmary and a new chapel; $11,000 from sundry donors, Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Reed, Mrs. William Reed Thompson, Mrs. Edward A. Reed, Mrs. Henry Van Cleef, Dorothy Thompson, Mrs. John C. Dilworth, Mrs. Thomas H. Eddy, to establish the William Thompson Reed Memorial Fellowship in memory of William Thompson Reed of the Class of 1929, the income to be awarded to a boy of character and promise at the beginning of his senior year; $102,000 from the estate of George B. Knapp, class of 1854, to establish the Knapp Brothers fund in memory of Arthur Mason Knapp and George B. Knapp, the income to be devoted to such uses as the board of trustees from time to time deem most likely to promote the greatest usefulness of the school; $5,000 legacy from Mabel L. Jones, who served as secretary to the headmaster a great many years; $1,000 from John T. Mercer to be added to the Aymer T. Mercer Memorial fund; $2,000 from Stanley Jacques Halle, Class of 1908, in his memory; $517,500 from an anonymous donor for property improvement.

The alumni also elected officers to serve for the ensuing year as follows: President, Vance C. McCormick, '91, Harrisburg, Pa.; vice presidents, Philip T. Nickerson, '80, Northcote, England; Joseph W. Lucas, '85, Philadelphia, Pa.; Walter C. Howe '90, Boston; E. Kirke Haskell, '95, New York; Henry H. Stebbins, '00, Rochester, N. Y., Harold R. Edwards, '05, Bangor, Me.; Alexander L. Jackson '10, Chicago; statistical secretary, George T. Eaton '73, Andover; secretary, Frederick E. Newton, '93, Andover; treasurer George F. French, '97, Andover.

Dwight H. Day of New York City, a member of the Class of 1895 served as toastmaster in the absence of Thomas D. Thacher, Class of 1900 who was detained in Washington, D. C., on official business. In a short address to the graduates, he told the boys to rejoice in what they have attained and reminded them that many of the old-time graduates would be glad to have the opportunity to return to Andover to start again in their course at "Old P. A."

Before announcing the gifts to the academy during the past year Dr. Stearns told the alumni that such occasions delighted him as he enjoyed again seeing the faces of some of the boys who have left the school during the past few decades. He said that seeing them makes him feel younger and gives him a feeling that he wants to get back again in spirit to the earlier days. He paid a glowing tribute to the graduating class which he said was full of leaders. He then spoke of the fine ability shown by former graduates and said that of the five boys to receive certain high honors at Dartmouth this year, two were Andover men. He said that he had been informed by the authorities at Yale that from the point of view of stability, reliability, sportsmanship, scholastic standing and all around leadership, the Andover boys topped all others. He then spoke of the reports from Harvard where he said of all prep schools and high schools with ten or more boys at Harvard, Andover had the highest percentage on the dean's list. Dr. Stearns then turned to pay a glowing tribute to "Pap" Eaton whom he said he had learned to love and respect through years of association with him, first as his teacher while he himself was a student at Andover and later as his colleague on the faculty. He related many interesting anecdotes of Mr. Eaton's and spoke of his characteristics, especially of his exactness in all matters at all times, his love and devotion to the high ideals of the school. He said that it was a privilege to work with him.

Dr. Stearns then spoke of the policies of the trustees of the academy, both in regard to the new construction work and the educational betterment and of the changes which are but just beginning. In addition to the many buildings already completed, the new dining hall and art gallery will be ready soon and work will start soon on the new chapel and also the infirmary. These are only a few of the new buildings in prospect, he intimated.

In speaking of the educational policies Dr. Stearns said that it is the aim of the trustees to send graduates from Andover to all corners of the earth, who will be real leaders of men and carry with them the highest ideals and traditions of the school.

There were tears in the eyes of the alumni members as well as those of the fair sex present when Mr. Eaton rose and made his brief address in which he recounted his experiences at Andover, both as a student in a little old one-room building in 1865 and later while a member of the faculty for fifty years. Although he had taught many fathers and sons and had hoped to teach the grandsons he had never had the opportunity although he knew of seven cases where his contemporaries's grandsons were in school today. He told the graduates that the school was their mother and they should always hold her in respect and devotion. He said he felt that he had not done all that he ought to have done and that he felt indebted to the school for all, and "I can only say God bless you." Appreciation was expressed for the kindness of the trustees in providing substitutes while he was out with sickness and now in a financial way when he is retired. Speaking of his friendships with boys and men of all races he pleaded for world peace saying that by our sympathetic feelings and cooperation only shall we hasten this human brotherhood.

Introductory Remarks of the Presiding Officer, Dwight H. Day, Class of 1895

Principal Stearns, Members of the Graduating Class, Members of the Beloved Faculty of Phillips Academy, Honored Guests, and, last and best of all, Ladies:

You seem to be so far away behind all these ribbons, we have had to play peekaboo with you to see you at all. We mere men like to get off that old joke of Mr. Choate's after a dinner of this kind, when you have looked on so patiently, that "Having seen the animals eat, you are now ready to hear them roar."

It reminds me of the boy's essay on "Man" "Man is what woman marries. He drinks, smokes and don't go to church. They both sprang from the monkey, but the woman sprang the farthest." You have stayed away so far today that we could not even hand you a morsel, but we admit that you are in a different category from ourselves and can live on ambrosia, nectar and all that stuff.

It is too bad that Judge Thatcher—we like to call him Tom—and Mr. Julius H. Barnes cannot be with us today. Tom Thatcher is now engaged in some lawyer's job down there in Washington; I think it is solicitor general, isn't it? He had to stay, I guess, to keep after some of those fellows. He evidently remembers the Bible injunction that the wicked flee when no man pursueth, but they make better time if someone is after them. So Tom has stayed in Washington to get after those fellows in the—I was going to say in the Senate, but I won't.

Mr. Barnes telegraphed in great humiliation, and I am going to read his wire. He was so kind as to give us this message. He telegraphed Dr. Stearns this morning: "Had arranged to fly on morning airship and now find on arrival airport sailing is cancelled on account of weather. No way to reach Andover in time. Completely inadequately equipped to express my own disappointment and regret and my great concern at disarranging your program. If I knew how to help amend no effort would be too great. I am very, very sorry."

Do you know of Nancy, the colored maid, who came back to report to her mistress on a wonderful wedding that she had attended? She described the beautiful day on which the wedding was given. It was magnificent, and the sun shone and the flowers were so wonderful and the people all crowded in so, and it was just fine, and the bridesmaids' dresses,—they were simply wonderful.

"Well, Nancy," said her mistress, "you don't say anything about the bridegroom."

"Why, d'yuh know, dat fool niggah nebber did show up."

It may be pretty hard on Mr. Barnes; he couldn't come. But people that can possibly come to Andover on any kind of an anniversary are just plain foolish when they stay away.

We have one little preliminary item of business to transact before we come to the feast of reason and flow of soul, and I will call on the chairman of the Nominating Committee, Mr. Charles N. Kimball, to present the report of the Nominating Committee for the Alumni Association for officers for the ensuing year.

The report of the Nominating Committee was accepted.

Words fail me in the presence of this company and the lioness whom we have with us today, when I try to tell you about her. You know that one of our famous alumni is Samuel F. B. Morse. Dr. Claude Fuess has written about him in one of those marvelous works that has put the Academy supremely at the top of all such institutions in the country. Samuel F. B. Morse was an artist and, strange as it may seem, that ability was combined with technical ability and skill in mechanics. Samuel F. B. Morse was born in 1791 and he left Phillips Academy in 1805. Nine and five are fourteen. He left the Academy as a youngster. The Academy at that time must have been a very moderately low-grade school. However, he went on and in the '20s graduated from Yale.

Mr. Morse was blessed with a daughter, Leila. She was asked to come to America from Paris, where she now resides, this year to attend the meetings of certain institutions in the Academy of Arts in Philadelphia, with which her father had been identified, in order to give eloquence and tone and reality and history to the meetings of those societies this year. She crossed the ocean and came over and has attended those conferences, and everywhere she has been accorded a welcome most heartily and lovingly.

Mrs. Rummell not only crossed the ocean this year, but in conversation here with her she tells me she has crossed the ocean fifty-five times. Tom Cochran told me just before the luncheon that, as a matter of actual fact, the telegraph was discovered by Leila, that the public doesn't know it and the histories don't relate it, but she really was back of the whole thing, and she is perfectly willing to have her father, Samuel F. B., get the credit of history. But when we talk with her and when we look at her face at the age of eighty, we can believe that Leila could just do anything.

We have asked her today if she just won't say a word or two to these mere men just right out of her own heart, and anything that she cares to say to us, and remember that this ties way back the century that has gone to us right here today in the embodiment and personality of Leila Morse Rummell of Paris, whom I introduce to you. (Applause, all rising.)

Address by Mrs. Leila Morse Rummell

Will you let me read it?

When I was six years old I took part in the school celebration and was given a poem to recite, which began:

You'd scarce expect one of my age,
To speak in public on the stage.

And I think you will quite agree with me that this holds in the present. So I shall only say to you that I deeply appreciate your courtesy in having invited me to be present with you this afternoon. My visit to Andover has been the crowning joy of my stay in America this time. (Applause.) Please don't think that because I live in Paris that I am not an American. But I am an American. (Applause.)

This Andover is hallowed ground. It is hallowed by the presence and the spirit of my father and of my grandfather, and I shall certainly hope to come again when I am able to do so.

Now, in conclusion I would like to read to you the copy of a letter which was written to my father in 1838. Mark the day. The telegraph was invented in 1832, you know. This was written to him by an old schoolmistress in Lancaster, Ohio, to whom he had addressed a request for the use of the schoolhouse to show his telegraph. This is the copy:

"You are welcome to the use of the schoolhouse to debate all proper questions in, but such things as railroads and telegraphs are impossible and rankest infidelities. There is nothing in the Word of God about them. If God had designed that his intelligent creatures travel at the frightful speed of fifteen miles an hour by steam, he would certainly have foretold it through his holy prophets. It is a device of Satan to lead immortal souls down to hell." (Applause and laughter.)

Mr. Day. Mrs. Rummell has to go now and we will excuse her because her appointments are such that she must withdraw, much to her regret, she says.

Mrs. Rummell. I regret it very much.

Mr. Day. I am so far behind personally, and I am so ashamed of it, that I did not know that Pap was having a jubilee today. I asked him about that "Pap" just before lunch. He practically said he loved it, so it is all right, and I am old enough now to get it across.

Pap Eaton has a jubilee, as I said, today of his connection with Phillips Academy at Andover, and I am not asking you, I am telling you, that that is something great. And there are two or three who are going to tell a little bit about the history and situation, and they are going to do a couple of things for us, and I am going to call upon that adept in everything, Claude Fuess, to talk to us first. (Applause.)

Address by Dr. Claude M. Fuess

Mr. Toastmaster, the alumni of Phillips academy and ladies:

We are observing this afternoon two unique events. One of them you have already watched. The second is one unprecedented in academy history. Some years ago Mr. Matthew S. McCurdy—dear old Mac—died just as he was rounding out his forty-eighth year in connection with Phillips academy. Today one of the members of the faculty completes a full half century of service. Mr. George T. Eaton, who came to Phillips academy in 1880, after two years of teaching elsewhere, today completes fifty years of connection with this school. He has, therefore, taught here longer than any man in all the school's long history.

To some of those who come back to Andover Hill it almost seems as if "Pap" were the only permanent feature here. Among all these changes and shifts of ground he has remained immovable and those who come back to the old familiar haunts are glad to see him, I am sure. You see in him a symbol of that which is permanent upon Andover Hill. The graduates all know him, and I think I may say that he knows all the graduates, can call them each by name, and can tell them about their sisters and their cousins and their aunts.

My associates of the teaching staff, sir, wishing in some slight degree to signalize this momentous event, have instructed me to assure you of their respect and their affection. They have lived with you long in intimate association without a quarrel. They have come to look upon you as an invaluable authority on facts and on traditions, and they are proud of the record which you have made.

The easiest way in which I can express the feelings which some of us have towards you is in quoting the words of an American poet on an occasion not dissimilar from this, when Whittier, speaking of one of his old teachers, said:

Old friend, kind friend! lightly down
Drop time's snow-flakes on thy crown!
Never be thy shadow less.
Never fail thy cheerfulness;

Who shall work for us as well
The antiquarian's miracle?

Who shall give to thee and me
Freeholds in futurity?

And so, sir, as a testimony of the regard of your associates, I present you on this occasion with a slight testimonial of our affection with the hope that it may last long and that it may tick out for you many years as useful and as important as those which you have already served.

And I wish to assure the Alumni and the Faculty and others that the watch has been wound up and that it seems likely to go on as well as the recipient. (Applause and cheers, all rising.)

Mr. Day. We have been requested to call upon another man who would like to do a similar piece of work, and the name that has been given me of the man who is going to do the job is Mr. Walter S. Kimball of the Class of 1930. I will spare Mr. Kimball those blushes of any introduction. You all know that he is president of the Senior Class and he epitomizes and symbolizes and represents we believe the very best in our beloved academy. Mr. Kimball. (Applause and cheers.)

Address by Walter S. Kimball, Class of 1930

Mr. Toastmaster, ladies and gentlemen:

You have all heard that we have here this afternoon a member of the Faculty for the past fifty years who has been an inspiring figure to every boy who has passed through the academy and who has commanded the respect of all those who have ever been at the Hill. As the respresentative of the Senior Class and of the student body, I wish to present this gift to "Pap", on the back of which is this inscription:

"1880 to 1930
To Pap
as a token of the esteem in which he has been held for fifty years by the students of Phillips Academy.
The Undergraduates of 1930"

Mr. Day. We have received a third request that a man is waiting to do a similar piece of work to that of those which you have just witnessed, and the man's name as sent to us is that of Mr. Boetius Sullivan of the Class of 1905, commonly and ordinarily known as "Bull".

Address by Boetius H. Sullivan, Class of 1905

Mr. Toastmaster, Mr. Stearns, Pap, and faculty, and ladies and gentlemen:

I have been selected by my class, the greatest class of Andover (laughter and applause), the Class of 1905, which first developed the thought of superiority, of which we hear so much today, and I am sure that I am going to bespeak the heartfelt thanks and sentiments of all the Alumni when I give you on behalf of the Class of 1905, you who were my class adviser, who have been my boy's class adviser, and I hope will you be my grandson's class adviser—but you have evidently decided to rest for a while—so on behalf of that glorious class sitting over there, thirty of us back to our twenty-fifth reunion, I wish to present to you this vase. I come from Chicago. I will try to read the inscription on it:

"To George Thomas Eaton with appreciation, gratitude and affection, in recognition of his fifty years of invaluable service as teacher, adviser, and friend of students of Andover."

(Applause.)

Mr. Day. I would like to stand here, Pap, and talk about one hour about you, but I am reminded of the lady who knew her husband well, he being a minister, and as he was about to speak, she said, "Now, John, not only be brief, but be short." I would not be short with you, Pap, under any conceivable conditions.

After traveling out in Siam up in the northern jungles, with another graduate of the academy, Robert E. Speer, we came one afternoon to a little clearing in the jungle, and there we were welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. John H. Freeman. Dr. Freeman was a graduate of the academy and he had been out in Siam about forty years. After that trip around the world I happened to be in Andover and I ran across Pap, and I said, "Pap, I ran across Mr. Freeman out in Siam. Do you know what year he graduated?" And he said '81, right off the reel. Today I wanted to confirm Pap's memory, the value of his memory, and his accuracy. I said, "Pap, will you tell me again the year that John H. Freeman graduated from the academy?" And he stopped just two or three seconds and said '81. Later I felt a tweak at my sleeve and turning, Pap was standing there, and he said, "Day, I want to modify what I said to you. Freeman was '82." Now, that illustrates the accuracy and the downright honesty of Pap's mind. I tell you that is the kind of stuff you learn at Andover,—the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

One of my agonizing moments as a student in '94 and '95 was when Professor Eaton in that little old classroom that had that chimney going up one side of the wall—when Professor Eaton would say to his student who was particularly poor in mathematics, "Day, take the chimney piece." I certainly suffered when I had to take the chimney piece in Pap's mathematics class.

Pap, the Lord has delivered you unto my hand today, and I say, Pap, take the chimney piece. (Applause, all rising.)

Address by Professor George Thomas Eaton

Mr. President, Dr. Stearns, ladies and gentlemen, friends all:

In my life here I have met many sons of fathers whom I have taught. I had hoped to teach grandsons of former pupils, but that has not come to pass. Of course, I have known many cases of three generations in Phillips though I have not taught the three. In fact, this year there are at least in the school seven instances of this three-generations succession:—Kitchel, Deming and Dove, Griffing and Haskell, Seabury and Stebbins.

With gratitude unfeigned and abiding, I salute the Graduating class. For the seniors I wish rewarding days in all the years to come, and for the undergraduates rich experiences in fidelity and growth. This school is your mother. Treat her with reverence, with respect, with devotion. Let no act or word of yours mar her glory or lessen her prestige. With all my heart I thank the school for their gifts and bid them Godspeed while light and life and love possess them and this busy world forgets its strife and they lie down to pleasant dreams.

I feel that my work here in Andover has received too high praise this day. I feel humbly conscious that I have not done all that I ought to have done, all that my gifted and honored father would have wished me to accomplish.

I thank the givers of these gifts, the members of the school, my fellow-teachers, and the twenty-five year Class of 1905. I thank them with a profound gratitude—I thank them all. I feel indebted to each one of you and I can only say, God bless you, each and every one.

I have a very dear cousin, for many years a professor of mathematics in the Worcester Technical Institute, and who now in his eighty-fourth year is actively teaching in Redlands, California. His clearness in presenting the logical steps in mathematical deductions has always been to me an inspiration, and the joys and satisfactions of a teacher's life are in the awakening of interest in a student's mind. A striking instance of this awakening power has taken place this year now closing, and an added satisfaction is that it has taken place in a pupil whose father I taught here years ago.

In my many years of teaching at Andover the trustees of this school have been very kind to me. With great thoughtfulness they have provided substitute teachers without expense to me in the periods of my enforced absence through sickness, and in later years they have gradually lessened the number of hours that I must spend in the classroom, and now a generous provision for my financial future. I owe them an abiding debt, and I wish here and now to express to them my sincere gratitude for all their remembrance of me and mine.

I have but one thought to set before you this day, one theme only, and that is that I am brother to all the sons of men the world around. Let my life story prove this.

In the fall of 1865 I sat as a pupil in the small one-room wooden building standing in the yard behind the Stone Academy and at the opening of the morning session a young lad of evident eastern birth who had just joined the academy was given the seat next to mine. He had been a stowaway from Japan on a vessel owned by Mr. Alpheus Hardy, the president of our Board of Trustees. This young lad became a frequent visitor in my mother's home here in Andover, went on to Amherst college, returned to Andover to study in the Theological Seminary, often came to our house, made his wonderful appeal at the meeting of the American Board in Rutland, Vermont, founded the Doshisha in Japan, and at his death was mourned by the whole empire.

In my boyhood I admired him, in my maturer years I marveled at his influence. I realized that the place of a man's birth is of little importance. Joseph Neesima, the Japanese, was a scholar and a patriot, transcending all national bounds.

In my Phillips class was Madison Smith, a negro. He went on to Amherst, and many an evening we walked arm in arm along the shaded village streets talking of the past and of the present and planning for the future. But his severe struggle to secure funds with which to meet his expenses in education sapped his vitality and at the close of his sophomore year he was entrusted to my care to see that he reached Boston in safety on the steamcars, to be with friends there. I never saw him again, for soon he had passed out of life.

In recent weeks I have been rereading his letters to me which I have kept all these years, and I desire here and now to testify to my affection and friendship for him. His skin was black, his soul was white.

During my college years there lived in my mother's family Lin Luen Fai and Lin Luen Shing, brothers, placed here in the academy through the honorable Yung Wing of Hartford. They ate at our table, bowed in prayer at the morning hour, repeated verses of Scripture at the evening meal, were lovable, friendly guests.

Lin Luen Fai became a beloved physician in Tientsin and Lin Luen Shing a devoted leader and officer in the Chinese navy.

My first teaching was in Monson academy, and I there came in contact with a studious Armenian, Jacob Buzdikian.

There hangs on the wall in Room 17 of the Samuel Phillips building a clock given by the Class of 1892. The presentation speech of dignity and charm was given by Charles Morris, a colored man.

In this same schoolroom is a teacher's flat-top desk given by the Class of 1893. The words spoken at the offering of this gift were made by William T. B. Williams, another colored man, whose friendship I value and whose public career I admire.

Pi Yuk, known later as Sir Chentung Liang-Cheng, ran in and out of our house freely with joy to us all. In 1903 he was an especially honored guest at our Commencement, as the academy came to its one hundred and twenty-five years of history. I paid him a call of homage at his Berlin home while he was Chinese ambassador to the German Court.

For six weeks in 1912-13 I lived in the Berlin home of three German sisters and was with them at the New England Thanksgiving, at the German Christmas and at the universal New Yoar.

Out of all these experiences, Japanese, Negroes, Armenian, Chinese, Germans, there has been borne in upon me the profound conviction that not race nor color of skin should be considered in friendship, but simply one's attitude to life and its outward expression in kindly deeds and thoughtful words.

Do we want peace in the world? Then let us think well of all nations and all races and by our sympathetic dealings and our cooperative measures hasten the coming of this human brotherhood. (Applause, all rising.)

Mr. Day. Al and I have felt like the two Englishmen as we have been sitting through this luncheon, who were sitting at a dinner in London, where nobody knows anybody else, and one of the men said to the man next to him, "This is kind of slow, isn't it?" And his neighbor replied, "Why yes." And the fellow said, "Let's get out." But the other man said, "I can't. I am giving the dinner." (Laughter.) Neither one of them could leave. Neither Al nor I could leave. We have been absolutely up against it.

Before he says a word to us may I be forgiven if I hitch right on to something that Professor Wallace was saying this morning and that Professor Eaton has just said and that Nicholas Murray Butler said the other day at that great event when a concourse of people met at Columbia at the commencement exercises. That is the idea of unity.

Mr. Steinmetz, that great technician and engineer of the General Electric, said not long before he died that the great principle and ideal of the coming generation was going to be represented by the word Unity. It is coming, as we know, in our great industrial organizations. It is coming in our international relations. It is coming in the understanding of men of themselves. Unless a man has that unity in his own mind and heart that is his right as a cultured, educated man, he is an unhappy man. He is pulled by two forces, or more than two forces. But if he is unified, he is a happy man.

Professor Eaton has given us a grand thought in this thought of world unity, and this is illustrated at Andover, as we know. Here we are drawn together. We are unified. In New York I might be going along Wall Street and Tom Cochran wouldn't know me, but up here it is Tom and Dwight. But we are unified here, and I thank God we are unified when we get here. All these extraneous things, all these little furbelows of life, are wiped away, and we are unified

We are unified in a person. If you get a personality, you know, to illustrate a great principle or a cause or an ideal, you are all right. You can refer to a fellow of personality. And this personality that unifies us here at Andover is the personality of Al.

There is one additional thought, if you will pardon me a few seconds, and that is the idea of aliveness. Nicholas Murray Butler was on the news movie reels. They showed Dr. Butler addressing the commencment crowd, this vast throng, thirty thousand diplomas were given, I believe, that day. They showed him making his address, but they only quoted one or two sentences out of that half hour's address. What were they? On the news reel, and the same sentences were quoted in the New York papers next morning after his address—I attended the showing of the news reel and saw his picture and heard the sentences.

They were these:

"There are millions of people, as we all know, existing. They are living. But only a very few of us are alive."

That was President Wallace's thought in those passages of his magnificent address this morning: It is easy to eat and sleep; it is easy to live, just to exist. But to be alive, that is what we have education for.

Dr. Butler said that the bridge that takes us over from this mere existing state, from the eating and the sleeping of President Wallace, the bridge that bridges that chasm into aliveness, into perception, into independent living, into planning, into purpose, into service, into vitality, into truth, the great eloquence, the greater than eloquence, that gets us somewhere,—the bridge that does that is the bridge of education.

And men—men of the Graduating Class—I am middle-aged, and I can tell you, as President Wallace told you this morning—and please forgive me if it sounds like preaching—rejoice in what you have. Rejoice in it. A lot of us old guys that look like hickory nuts wish we had the chance over again. We wish we had another chance and we would begin earlier to be alive.

The personality, the embodiment of this aliveness to us all is Al. He embodies the unity in Andover for us; he embodies the live, personal leadership. Think just for a moment of the literature, the books, that Al is putting out, this leavening power that has been going out to the youth of our land.

I sat with him, by a great privilege, the other night in a hotel in New York when he and other leaders were considering the state of ideals in schools and colleges, and Al made the address of the evening there that night. That is the kind of man who is unifying us here, who in his personality lives this wonderful idea and ideal of unity. That is the kind of man who represents to us this leadership, this leadership that leads across the bridge from simply being alive, being in existence, into a real, vital, perceptive aliveness.

'Nuf sed. Al!

Address by Dr. Alfred E. Stearns

Mr. Toastmaster, Honored Guests, Members of the Alumni and Ladies:

After that introduction I am rather wordless for the moment, but I take courage in looking around on some of these familiar faces among the old grads, still boys, who are returning to us at this time and who always give me a quickening as I face them every year at this dinner, a new lease of life, and a rejuvenation, as it were.

It always tempts me to reminisce a little bit, too, when I look into some of those faces because invariably they identify themselves with incidents in my earlier career which I love to dwell upon and think about and try to get back into sometimes—play them over again.

I looked over there a minute ago—he has fled now; perhaps he was afraid I was going to speak about him—and I saw Tom Lane. I was reminded of the time when Tom came to me and protested vigorously against a partnership which he had formed with dear old Big Thompson. Big Tommie has gone, now, bless his memory. The two Toms had formed a partnership in the clothes-pressing business. It prospered for a time, but Big Tom's appetite was too big for the profits. He could eat half a dozen steaks down at Chap's at one sitting, and when it came, to dividing the profits, there were no profits to divide. So Tom Lane came to me to see if there was not some way I could devise to break up that partnership.

Then I looked back into the past and talked with our old friend Bob Reinhart. Bob was playing third base. We had some difficulty in getting him eligible sometimes, and one night we had kept dear old Mac up until after midnight to give him a final examination by which we hoped to remove a condition which would prevent him playing that next day. And I think, by the way, it was the third examination he had had since five o'clock that evening. He passed.

Mr. Eaton, who was my mentor and guide then, as he has been ever since, was a little worried as he looked upon my youth, a little troubled lest I should not measure up to the tradition. He came out to remonstrate vigorously with me—I was coaching the Jean Goldkette's nationally famous Casa Loma orchestra of Detroit, without question one of the greatest dance bands in America today, will make its debut in the Merrimack valley when it plays at Roseland-on-the-Merrimack this evening. It has already scored sensational hits at Charleshurst and at Nutting's this season. On Friday June 27, Roseland will offer another great attraction in the person of Bob Causer and his Cornell Collegians, world-famous Cornell University band which spends its vacations playing to tremendous crowds in Cuba, Panama and European cities. This will be the first New England appearance of this top-notch orchestra.

Roseland has never booked two more famous bands on successive Friday evenings and it is confidently expected that both will attract capacity gatherings to Greater Lawrence's most beautiful ballroom. Roland Russell's Ramblers will occupy the orchestral stage for check dancing parties every Wednesday and Saturday evening throughout the season. This is the band which a few weeks ago established a new Roseland attendance record of 2217 persons. Phillips Alumni Nine Defeated at Andover

Phillips academy officially closed its 1930 season last Friday afternoon by defeating the Alumni nine, 6 to 3, in an interesting seven-inning ball game. By virtue of its win the youngsters got revenge for the defeat handed them a year ago by the "old-timers."

Three runs garnered in the sixth frame, the final time at bat for the academy boys, settled the contest. In the first half of the seventh inning the "old grads" came through with a trio of runs that would have knotted the count had not the academy team tallied in its half of the sixth.

Previous to the latter inning, however, the present-day players had tallied one in the second, third and fourth frames.

The Alumni outfit outhit the academy lads, 9 to 7, but failed to bunch their hits and make them count. In misplays the former players excelled and were far superior in that department, making seven to but one for the 1930 nine.

Dr. Alfred E. Stearns, headmaster of the Phillips academy, who captained the Blue in 1889 and '90, twirled the first inning for the Alumni nine. Not a hit was made from him and only four faced him. Kimball the first batter, hit a hard one back at "Al" that he knocked down and threw the Blue captain out at first. Scott then walked, but Captain-elect Woodlock struck out. Williamson flied out to Phil Riley, local boy, who made a beautiful running catch in deep center.

Bart Hayes, former Harvard captain twirled the second inning and allowed one hit, Rod Brown, Jr., hitting a triple to deep right with one out. He scored on Mayer's sacrifice to Jack Lord, ex-Bowdoin.

For the next two innings, Philip K. Allen, a member of the Yale freshman team of this season, worked, and was found for three hits and two runs. Brooks Palmer, Andover, '19, finished the game and was found for three hits and as many runs.

Rodney W. Brown, Jr., of Reading twirled the entire distance for the 1930 outfit and was found for nine hits, but good support afield held the score of the Alumni down.

The Alumni went down in order in the opening half of the first inning. In the latter half with two out, Scott walked and stole but was left as Woodlock fanned and Williamson flied out to Riley.

In the second the Alumni again went down in order. With one out in the latter half, Brown trippled to right, Mayer flied to Jack Lord, scoring Brown. Wing reached on Lennie Burdett's error and Crane fanned.

Burdett opened the third inning for the Old Grads by hitting safely into right field. He stole second. Cushman, P. A. '05, hit to Woodlock, who threw him out at first. Batchelder threw across to Kimball at third, nailing Burdett for a double killing. Lord died at first, Williamson to Batchelder.

In the second half with two out, Woodlock was passed and reached second on Allen's error. He stole third. Williamson was passed. Batchelder hit to Allen, who threw wild, allowing Woodlock to score. Brown struck out.

The Alumni went down in order in the fourth. Mayer opened the second half by beating out an infield hit to Cushman. The latter threw wildly to first and Mayer took second. Foreman scratched a hit to Burdett. Kellogg singled to right, scoring Mayer. Kimball and Guy Hayes fanned. Woodlock grounded out, Cushman to Clifford.

One was out in the fifth when Jim Dudley, P. A. '25, singled to center. Burdett flied to Williamson and Cushman died at first, Kimball to Batchelder.

In the last part of the frame Williamson reached on Billhardt's low throw. Batchelder flied to Burdett. Brown fanned and Mayer flied to Lord.

With one out in the sixth, Lord scratched a hit to Woodlock. He advanced on an infield out, Williamson to Batchelder on Palmer's hit and took third on a wild pitch. Allen died at first, Williamson to Batchelder. Foreman opened the second half with a single. Kellogg reached on Cushman's error. Kimball bunted and beat the play. Guy Hayes hit to Billhardt who threw home to Dudley, getting Foreman. Woodlock hit to left, scoring Kellogg. Williamson flied to Temple in right, scoring Kimball, while Hayes tallied when Dudley allowed the ball to get away from him on the throw home.

In the first of the seventh the Alumni tallied its three runs. Billhardt opened with a hit to left and stole second. Clifford struck out, Kellogg to Batchelder, while Billhardt went to third. The present Blue coach tallied when Dudley hit safely to center. Burdett singled to center, Cushman flied to Mayer. George Temple, former Andover boy, then tripled to right, scoring Dudley and Burdett.

Californians Entertained in Ballardvale

George Shaw, an old-time resident of Ballardvale, arrived there last week, after an absence of eight years, with his friend, John H. Easter of Los Angeles, and are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Miller of Center street. They made the trip by automobile in seventeen days, stopping en route at Albuquerque, Colorado Springs, Denver, Kansas City, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Cleveland and Buffalo.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller tendered them a reception and "Welcome Home" at their residence Tuesday evening. The guests included Dr. and Mrs. William Shaw af Santa Monica, Cal., who are spending the summer in New England with headquarters at Hotel Bellevue, Boston, Mrs. Martha E. Craven, Miss Blanch I. Crawshaw, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Hey and sons, Mr. and Mrs. J. Edwin Shaw and son, Mrs. Benjamin Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Eldon E. Fleury and family, Mrs. Joseph Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Irving R. Shaw and family, William D. McIntyre, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Petty.

Refreshments were served, and a musical program given by the young people was greatly enjoyed by all.

Children Give Principal Surprise

The children in Grade A of the John Dove school entertained their teacher, Mrs. Margaret Kimball, principal of the school, at a surprise party following the afternoon session, Tuesday. The children's plans worked out very nicely, for when Mrs. Kimball asked for a few volunteers to assist in putting some of the books away, she received a fine response and on returning to her room after a tour of the building, she found that the entire class was present with a bountiful supply of ice cream, cake, candy and soft drinks. Mrs. Kimball was presented with a $5-gold piece, the presentation being made by Mary Simeone.

The children also invited Miss Alice Stack, Miss Catherine Barrett, Miss Mary O'Dowd and Miss Bessie Carter, other teachers in the building to attend the party and share in the goodies.

The following committee was in charge of the arrangements for the party: Mary Simeone, chairman; Katherine Francke, Jeannette Deyermond, Lucy Beck, Ruth Hardy, Helen Foster, and Sutton Monro.

Farmer Govan was taking a walk when he came upon the vicar, who was looking very depressed.

"Sorry to hear about the fire at the vicarage," said the farmer. "Was there any serious damage?"

"Yes, Govan," replied the vicar sadly, "very serious damage and loss."

"That be bad," said the farmer, with a touch of sympathy. "Something destroyed that ye cannot replace?"

"Ten years' sermons burnt to a heap of ashes," was the reply.

"My, but that must have been some blaze, sir," returned the farmer, his memory going back to ten years of weary Sunday mornings. "They was all very dry."—London Answers.

BABSON DESCRIBES FAVORABLE AND UNFAVORABLE FACTORS IN BUSINESS SITUATION

Likens Business Situation to a Man Convalescing from a Severe Illness—Business Will Also Get Well by Having a Desire to Improve and Being Willing to Undergo Process of Taking Its Medicine

Babson Park, Massachusetts, June 20, 1930. The business situation today is like a man who has been very sick and is slowly convalescing. The crisis of the disease has passed, the fever is down, but the patient is very weak. He is, moreover, subject to occasional set-backs and relapses. The doctors have done all they can, and now only time, rest, and nature can make him well again. With regard to business we can, however, have absolute confidence in its recovery. We know that business' constitution is strong, and we have seen it weather other serious spells of sickness in the past.

Carrying the analogy further, let us examine the symptoms which now indicate the condition of the patient. Trade statistics are generally unfavorable in comparison with a year ago, and approach the conditions existing in 1927 and 1924. The four darkest symptoms on the state of business' health are: First, the agricultural situation; second, reduced automobile sales; third, the lower rate of building; and fourth, the fact that so many people are in debt or unable to pay their bills. These conditions aggravate each other. We thought the farmers were badly off last year, but present indications are that they will receive about 10 per cent less this year. Lower farm income is a prime factor in the reduction of automobile sales; smaller production of motor cars requires less steel and copper, thus affecting these industries and a score of other important industries. Building of roads has increased, but ordinary residential building is running about 40 per cent below last year. This has thrown carpenters and workmen out of work, which in turn has reacted on the building of new houses by causing families to "bunch up." In times of depression, young people go to live with parents, or parents who are out of work come to live with the young people. Vacant houses are more plentiful, thus lessening the demand for new building. Retail trade is affected by unemployment and the fact that almost everyone was in debt through installment buying, even before factories began to close down. Collections, therefore, have slowed up. These then are some of the important unfavorable symptoms in the business situation.

Favorable Factors

On the other side of the business patient's hospital chart let us place the favorable symptoms. These are, first, plentiful money at low rates; second, deflated commodity prices and lower living costs; third, the prospects of early relief from agitation in Congress by reason of adjournment; and fourth, the increasing tendency of the people to save money. Ultimately, periods of depression are curbed only as the motives, ambitions, and purposes of our people are changed. Business will get well for the same reasons and in the same way that a man who has been sick gets well. First, he must have the desire to improve; and second, he must be willing to undergo patiently the tedious process of taking his medicine. The fact that postal savings increased 10 per cent in the past nine months, that regular savings bank deposits are growing, and sales of life insurance have been increasing, indicates that the public is now willing to take its medicine through hard work and saving, and to build the foundation for future business' health. This fact of increased savings is one of the most optimistic barometers of business at the moment.

Cheap money will in the long run gradually assist in the recovery. The relatively lower level of commodity prices and living costs means that there is now no dangerous inflation, which is a much sounder foundation upon which to build than a high level of commodities and inflated costs. The final settlement of the tariff and the adjournment of Congress are other favorable prospects. Business will know where it stands in regard to legislation and politics at least during the summer recess. The elimination of this feeling of political uncertainty should do much good. Although no one of these favorable factors will necessarily bring about immediate recovery, yet they are of much importance in the long run. We have much to be thankful for; cheap money, a new spirit of thrift and industry in the public mind, lower commodity prices, and hot weather in Washington.

Some Lines Doing Better Than Others

The comparison between the course of business recession and recovery and the course of human sickness and recovery is really very close. However, at one point the analogy breaks down. When people are sick they get sick all over, and they gradually get well all over. In a case of pneumonia, a leg, or an arm, or a lung does not suddenly recover its strength while the rest of the body remains weak. With business it is different. All parts of business do not get sick at the same time, and some parts recover much more quickly than others. We hear much about so-called depression-proof industries. No industry is really depression-proof, but it is true that some lines stand up much better under adverse general conditions than do others. This is illustrated at present in the food business, the electric power companies, the best oils, and some of the natural gas companies. Securities of these companies also have held better than the average. Ship building is one of the few lines that shows more employment than a year ago.

The investor must study industries individually as well as the conditions of business as a whole. There is no rush about buying stocks. We are still engaged in the building of a foundation to counteract the former excesses of credit in both merchandising and investment affairs. Under such circumstances with business continuing dull we cannot expect anything but a lifeless and desultory stock market. This is the time for the investor to make sure that he has plenty of cash ready for bargains as they develop. Study the growing industries, some of which are mentioned above. Excellent gradual-growth opportunities will be uncovered in the next few months. We may take false starts followed by recurring relapses. That is characteristic of every period of readjustment. Just as trying to do too much causes a relapse in sickness, so will trying to force artificial recovery in business or investment values be followed by reaction. This is a time to pay attention to the important fundamentals. Students of the stock market would do well to put their attention on car loadings, commodity prices, iron and steel activity, building, automobile output, and retail trade. These are especially sensitive barometers of the course general business will take. When these various indicators begin to change, then we can expect the various groups of stocks to anticipate the broader movements which will develop therefrom.

Business by the Babsonchart now stands at nine per cent below normal compared with seven per cent above normal at this time a year ago.

Methuen 1—Punchard 0

Methuen High shut out Punchard High 1 to 0, at the Gill avenue grounds, Methuen, Saturday afternoon, inflicting the first defeat of the season upon the Lovely-coached team after an unbroken string of 14 victories.

Tommy Low held the victors to one lone hit, but it was the snappy infield combination of the Elwell-coached tribe which held Punchard in check, coupled with the fine pitching of everett Morrow.

Methuen scored the solitary run of the game in the last half of the opening inning, after retiring Punchard in order. With one out, Weston Deas drew a pass, and stole second. Clifford Burby was hit by Low and Alan Ingalls singled to short right, Deas and the others moving along. Deas scored when Wallace missed a low pitch by Low with Mills at bat, who later struck out. Rooks was thrown out on a grounder to second.

Methuen failed to reach first for the next six innings, Low pitching air-tight ball, but in the eighth, with on e down, he passed Cebula, who was cut down stealing to second.

It was Methuen's brilliant work afield which held Punchard in check. Three times Punchard went down with two men left on bases, and once, in the fourth inning, Lafayette Stickney, running for Kenneth Wallace, was cut down at the plate in a double play. Mills dropped the third strike on O'Donnell and pegged to first for the out, Burby snapping it back in time to effect the double out.

In the sixth inning, Stickney was again cut down at third, when O'Donnell fouled out to Mills. Stickney started for home, but was forced back and caught at third.

Everett P. Merrow, Jr., pitched a brilliant game for Methuen, his final, for he graduates this year. He was touched for five singles, three of them being from the bat of Wallace. He fanned seven, passed three, and hit Low, the opposing pitcher. He accepted his four chances afield without error.

Low was in prime form, holding Methuen to a single hit, fanned seven, and passed two. He also hit one opposing batsman, Burby and accepted five chances afield without error.

Punchard played errorless ball afield while Methuen had but two errors, both infield.

Punchard failed to reach in the first, Davidson fouling out to Rooks, McTernen fanned, and Walker flied out to Clarence Dawson. Methuen scored the only run of the game in the latter half, when with one out, Wolfendale popping to Asonian, Deas drew a walk. He stole second. Burby was hit by Low. Ingalls singled to right, advancing Deas to third, from whence he scored on a passed ball by Wallace. Mills fanned, and Rooks grounded out to Asonian.

Low grounded to Ingalls at short in the second and was out at first. Wallace singled to center. Stickney, running for him, stole second but died there. Asonian, O'Donnell and Bissett grounded out. For Methuen, Ingalls fouled out to Bissett, and Mills and Rooks were both called on strikes.

In the fifth, Bissett grounded to Ingalls at short being retired at first. Gouck walked. Davidson fanned, Mills dropping the third strike, but making a quick peg to first, which Burby missed. Punchard was again retired the result of a double play in the seventh inning, Methuen's third of the game. Bissett went out on a grounder to Ingalls at short. Ingalls fumbled Gouck's grounder to short. Gouck then stole second, but Davidson attempting a bunt, popped to Merrow, and Gouck was caught off the bag at second, Merrow to Ingalls. Methuen again went out in order, Ingalls and Mills popping in order to Low, with Rooks grounding to short to be thrown out by Walker.

In the eighth, McTernen fouled to Burby. Walker fanned. Low was hit by Merrow, and stole second, but died there Wallace popping out to Deas. Methuen reached first for the first time since the opening inning in the latter half, when with one out, Clarence Dawson grounding to short to be thrown out by Walker, Cebula drew a pass. He was cut down attempting to steal second, Wallace to Walker. Merrow grounded to Low and was retired at first.

In the ninth, Asonian fanned. Coach Lovely sent in William Greene as a pinch-hitter for O'Donnell, after one strike had been called on the latter. Greene fanned, and Bissett popped to Rooks.

baseball team—for playing Bob, and I had to talk some time to convince him that all the laws of the Medes and Persians had been kept and that Bob was duly eligible.

Then I see down here our old friend Chalifoux. Chalifoux arrived in my house from Lowell one night with a recruit for the football team. The first or second year of my principalship we were sadly in need of a good husky man in the line. Somebody had suggested to Chalifoux that they ought to have some good husky candidates over at Lowell, so Chalifoux went over there and found this fellow. I don't know where he got him.

So he came to my house one evening with this man or animal, or whatever it was, in tow. He had a face that was a combination of Dempsey and a hippopotamus. I never saw anything like it for lack of intelligence in my life. And this great husk of a thing sat in my chair while Chalifoux vigorously, eloquently and almost prayerfully told what a wonderful fellow he was, how all his life he had aspired for an education, how he had been the sole support of a widowed mother and children too numerous to mention; he worked all day and studied nights at the Y. M. C. A. to fit himself for the glorious opportunity of an education at Phillips Academy.

Every time I tried to get in a word or two Chalifoux shut me off. After an hour or more his wind gave out and he could not go on, and I turned to this old husk and I said to him, "What about your work? How far have you been?" He lifted his eyebrows and looked at me in a sort of a dazed way, and said nothing.

Chalifoux broke in again, but I cut him short and turned to the man and said, "What studies have you had? How far have you gone in school?"

Finally, he knit his brows, and you could hear the machinery just creaking inside, what was left of it, and he blurted out this magnificent statement, "Well, I'se been as fur as the United States in arithmetic." (Laughter.)

I turned to Chalifoux and said, "That doesn't look to me as if he would quite measure up to our entrance requirements, does it?"

Chalifoux turned to me and said, "I will talk it over with him later." And they left, and I have never seen him since.

There are plenty more incidents that I could pin on others of you, but it is getting late and I want to spare you.

I want to say a word in tribute to the present senior class that is leaving us this year. I have worked with a good many. I have worked with its representatives in the student council, and it is one of those classes that is a delight to any headmaster. It has supplied real leaders on whom we could lean, on whom we could depend, not only ready to cooperate, but ready to anticipate, if necessary. I have never had a more satisfactory group to work with than I have had this year. That spirit has permeated the entire school, as it invariably does when you have leaders of that outstanding type in your senior class. So the year as a whole has been one of the pleasantest we have had in many years here.

I take off my hat to those boys who are leaving us. We are proud of their record and we are, I know, going to be increasingly proud as they go on to college and the world that it awaiting outside the college doors.

It is natural that we should have a report of the school year at this time. You have seen for yourselves what we have been doing in the way of material things on the hill. A beautiful art gallery, to house that beautiful art collection which we have and which is growing every day almost, will be completed by another year.

The dining hall, whose magnificence you have felt and tasted for yourselves, will go into operation this next school year under the most competent management that we could possibly secure, providing board for the entire student body, with a room for each class, so the classes for four years will board together and get together more intimately than they have been able to do in the past.

Very shortly we shall start work on the new chapel and the new infirmary, both of which have been given to us by loyal alumni.

We have received for these various purposes during the year one million dollars from anonymous donors.

(Dr. Stearns then announced the details of the various gifts which had been received during the school year.)

Dr. Stearns continued:

Things like that would have almost staggered us a few years back and it would have taken a great many years of Commencements to cover a list like that.

I do not need to dwell on the changes which you are seeing for yourselves and which every one of you whom I meet comments upon so enthusiastically. I think I may safely say that inside, internally, we are trying at least, and I believe with success, to keep abreast of these material improvements so that we shall not be overwhelmed by the beauty of our outward makeup or overtopped by its high standards. This year would give us pretty good testimony of that fact, not only in the record of the class which had graduated, but in the records that have been coming to us from time to time from our boys in the colleges.

At Dartmouth recently I think it was five men in the senior class were given exceptional privileges in the way of newly established fellowships, and two of those men were Andover graduates. A record which was given me confidentially from Yale not long ago covering the records of the last year's freshman class showed on their figures that the Andover delegation in the point of view of general stability, general reliability, general standing in the class room, and so forth, overtopped all of the schools represented there that year. The very week that I received that I received a notice from the dean of Harvard saying that of all the schools last year that had sent ten or more men to Harvard Andover had the largest percentage on the dean's list. These are things that give us cause for cheer and make us believe we are living up to our responsibilities inwardly as well as outwardly.

I cannot let this moment pass without saying just a word about Mr. Eaton. This is his day. This is really his meeting. It is his celebration. And I rejoice that I have had a chance to participate in it.

I sat under Mr. Eaton in the classroom and I learned a lot. I came back here and worked with him as a colleague and, as I said a minute ago, I think he regarded me a little suspiciously at first. It amused me at the time. Later it stirred in me a feeling of respect, still later a feeling of admiration and reverence, for it was his love of and devotion to the high ideals of the school that rightly made him nervous when a mere stripling like myself came in here to take the reins. He wanted to be sure that I appreciated what this school was, what it stood for, what my responsibilities were.

I can remember very well how day after day he would come into the office on one pretense or another just to keep a fatherly eye on me, to see that I would not make any bad breaks. I can remember how when the catalogues came out there would be left on my desk the first issue with careful red ink marks all the way through. I don't think he ever went to bed that night. No comment was ever made by him, but he kept me up to the scratch. He made me realize that accuracy was demanded here, that thoroughness was in the air and that this old school could not go on and maintain its high traditions unless a man was on the job every minute, all the time. And I have lived to bless him for it and to thank him for it. And I thank you now. (Applause.)

Several times when I have been talking with new teachers whom we have had under consideration for positions in the school, they have said to me, "I understand Andover does not pay very well when it starts a man but it is an awfully difficult school to get away from when it gets started."

And I have said, "You have only to look over the list of the faculty and see how long they have been here to see that that is so. We do not make our appeal to you on the first year perhaps. Some of the private schools can do much better. But we offer you an opportunity to work in a school that will kindle your loyalty to it so that you will never want to leave it once you have gotten your roots in deep."

That is to me the real beauty of this school. Mr. Eaton mentioned others. But when you look at this faculty and feel the influence they have exerted year after year, one can feel justly proud to be connected with an institution that develops among its teaching force a love and affection and devotion of that kind. That is what spells success for the school, that has spelled it in the past, that spells it today, and that will spell it in the days to come.

It has been a real privilege to me to work with Mr. Eaton as a colleague and as an adviser to me and as a friend during all the years of our association. And I am glad that he has lived to see this splendid and affectionate testimonial on the part of his old boys and his colleagues to the splendid work that he has done among us.

In closing, let me say briefly that we are not through yet. People have said to me, "I suppose you have reached the end now of all you planned to do." We are just beginning. We have a lot more to do. I have spoken of buildings that we have in prospect, but the trustees for the last two or three years have been wrestling day after day, in the full board and in committees, on other plans which call for even larger and more significant development of the school in the years to come, not necessarily in material ways on the outside, but in the character and standards and scope and breadth of its education, so that boys more and more as they pass through these halls will go out with a stamp upon them that will make them indeed leaders of men, carrying to all corners of the earth, as they do today, the Andover spirit, and the Andover spirit in an even more intense and broader form than we of this generation know it.

I thank you for coming back here. It has been an inspiration to us all, and we hope that those of you who have been here on this day will get a new inspiration and a new desire to come again, and that you will bring other members with you, for this occasion is a refreshment to us who work here on the hill for the school and we cannot begin to tell you what it means to us to work in the days that are ahead. So keep it up, please. (Applause, all rising.)

Mr. Day. The editor who had filled the four columns of the outside sheet of his paper on a certain subject, when he got to the end of the fourth column, said, "For further discussion of this interesting subject, see our insides." Well, we have all eaten and now we will have to go out to see the alumni defeat the team.

We thank you, and the meeting is declared adjourned.

Death

June 13, 1930, at 13 Bartlet street, Isabel McIntosh, aged 66 years, 3 months and 9 days.

Washington Current Comment

Six young people tell a Chicago judge that they will not support their aged and infirm mother. A slight discrepancy in numbers does not vitiate the German proverb that a parent maintains ten children easier than ten children one parent.

A jail-bird in Jersey, liberated by mistake, was enticed back to the prison by the statement that his signature to some formal papers was needed. A liar is a liar, but probably the officials justify their conduct by the maxim: "Do evil that good may come of it."

Judging from the slaps which Tardieu and Mussolini are taking at each other, the man was right who said that friendship does not thrive upon greatness.

The potentialities of commonplace things would form the basis of an interesting essay. A peach held under the nose of a Virginia farmer who was committing suicide by starvation, brought him to his senses; and one Chicagoan is reported to have stabbed another to death with an ambrella.

England is beginning to talk seriously about home rule for India. The mother-country could make no better bargain than to relax her grip on the internal affairs of India, receiving in return a loyalty of the sort which has made Canada and Australia of value in every hour of need.

The President has sent his Eskimo dog to a cool place for the summer: a trivial item, if it did not bring up the question as to whether there is enough good derived from menageries and zoos to offset the cruelty resulting from confining wild animals under conditions entirely different from those of the habitat provided for them by the God who is the God of beasts as well as of men.

A half-hundred perish in a marine collision in Massachusetts Bay. The matter will be forgotten in a month. Of all momentous disasters, those involving large loss of life are held most lightly in remembrance. How many readers of this column, for instance, will compare the New England wreck with the loss of the Lady Elgin, which carried 287 passengers out of 385 to the bottom of Lake Michigan.

Having weighed the arguments of both the peaceful and the pugnacious, it appears that what the country needs is armament that is small enough to conquer the tax collector, and large enough to lock the rest of the world.

The Commissioner of Education favors paper-bound volumes on the ground that, with book prices cut in half, the reading public will have the equivalent of twice as much money to spend for literature. When it comes to putting a maximum percentage of the cost of production into subject-matter rather than trimmings, no publication can vie with the newspaper.

Washington has fixed the responsibility for a fire that burned away the lives of five children and their mother. She was careless with her flat-rion when she stopped pressing the children's clothes at midnight, to make supper for her husband, who had just come home from work.

A municipality reports that it costs thirty cents apiece to register the voters and count the ballots. Judging by some elections, there has been a shameless squandering of the public money.

Premier Tardieu's speech at Dijon leaves at first a faint impression that France has shouldered a chip for Mussolini or someone else to knock off. The key to the address, however, is found in the Premier's declaration that his country wishes peace through stability, with the will to remain master of her own destiny, should unexpected difficulties arise. In these words, he has briefed the case not of France alone, but of every other self-respecting nation, though many spokesmen have failed to command language which could be so plainly understood.

An advertisement describes an airplane provided with lavatory, kitchenette, folding berths, radio, writing desk, book case, thermos bottles, serving trays, and a refrigerator. The grandsons of the men who were content to pick up horsehsoes from the road, will be able to start housekeeping on articles gleaned along well-travelled airways.

A specially trained Russian student, sent to America to look things over, has committed suicide in Kansas, in preference to obeying an order from his government that he return to Petrograd. All that the Russian proletariat needs, to complete its disillusionment with respect to Sovietism, is more education at home, and a better knowledge of what is going on abroad.

A new locomotive engine has a bed and an electric fan for the engineer. This suggests a story which a former Secretary of Agriculture used to tell, about a farmer who was so progressive that he introduced labor-saving machinery to the point where it was necessary to build a gymnasium in which the hired man could exercise.

The French are moving rapidly out of the Rhineland, leaving a territorially curtailed but politically intact Fatherland. It will not be long before the last track left by a Gallic boot heel will be effaced, and the "Watch on the Rhine" will reassume its ancient significance:

"No enemy shall tread thy strand."

A current motion picture is laid in the Kingdom of Begonia, which seems to be one of the few countries which has not filed a protest against the tariff bill.

The Supreme Court of the United States holds that the purchaser of liquor for drinking purposes is not a criminal, under the law as it now exists. The decision states that it is fair to assume that Congress, when it came to pass the prohibition act, knew what it was doing, and deliberately and designedly omitted to impose upon the purchaser of liquor for beverage purposes, any criminal liability. Although the wets seem to have the best of it, the decision is not without a grain of comfort for the drys, since it points out clearly that the schnapps-buyer is standing upon ice so thin that it can be broken readily by legislative enactment.

The Glasgow church which invited its members to bring their pipes to meeting, thinks that smoking here is better than smoking hereafter.

A Florida city has passed an ordinance intended to promote the discomfort of a well-known Chicago gangster temporarily within its boundaries. Pun-making is not in good repute with the cultivated, but the ban is not heavy enough to cause the repression of the remark that he is accustomed to facing and handling ordnance.

The Senator who denounces dial phones as a pest, and asks that they be removed from the Capitol, does not believe that one good turn deserves another.

Do you know Leaflet 39, Eggs at any Meal, issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture? At this season of the year eggs are plentiful and the bulletin suggests a variety of uses in the menu.

SHAWSHEEN VILLAGE

Mrs. Frederick C. Smith of 18 Argyle street is recovering from an operation performed recently at the "Richardson House", private wing of the Boston Lying In hospital, Longwood avenue, Boston.

She expects soon to be able to join her children at the summer home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Wright at Squantum.

"Inside" Information

Allow mud stains to dry and brush carefully before any other treatment. Sometimes nothing else is needed. Or, if the fabric is washable, use soap and water. On other fabrics, try sponging with wood alcohol, denatured alcohol, or plain water. Mud stains may be taken off black silks of firm weave by rubbing the spot with a cut raw potato. The thin film of starch left by the potato can be brushed off when dry. This treatment is not recommended for any other materials. It leaves a spot on any except black fabrics.

For washing and rinsing utensils a clean, safe water supply is absolutely necessary. Contaminated water may be a source of danger not only to persons living on the farm but also to those who use milk from the farm. Wells and springs should always be protected from surface drainage. The drainage from privies, hog pens, barnyards, and other source of contamination should always be away from the well, and both springs and wells should be walled in, curbed, and tightly covered.

Watercress fine chopped and creamed with butter, makes a delicious spread for graham bread sandwiches for club meetings, teas, and other social occasions. Minced parsley, flavored with a few drops of lemon juice, and mixed with butter, is another appropriate spread for sandwiches that are to be cut into fancy shapes with cooky cutters.

Corned meat kept over into the next summer should be watched closely in the spring, as the brine is likely to spoil. If the brine appears to be "ropy", remove the pieces of meat and scrub them thoroughly with a stiff brush and hot water. Then repack and cover with new brine. The brine should be kept in a cool place, as the sugar in it has a tendency to ferment.

Children who profess not to like eggs or milk will often eat custards, omelets, milk puddings, milk-vegetable soups, and egg-milk drinks if they are well-flavored. The wise parent will not call attention to the ingredients of such dishes, but will simply offer them as a matter of course in their regular place in the meal.
